Stewart is a great example of a partner who has grown and evolved with the company, beginning as a staff accountant in 1979 and working his way through senior, supervisor and manager positions before becoming a partner more than two decades ago.

During this time, Stew has embraced many challenges, and took on leadership roles within and outside of the firm. His attention to detail, technical skills in the financial reporting area, problem solving ability and extensive experience in various business operational and financial processes have been invaluable to our clients. His expertise extends to providing support for companies that have chosen to outsource their chief financial officer (CFO) position and responsibilities for both short and long-term periods where he has also developed policies and procedures to add stability, control, and greater operational efficiency.

Other key areas of practice include wholesale and distribution, service providers, and manufacturing/assembling. Specific industry experience includes the advertising and marketing, software development and marketing, jewelry, apparel, real estate and the heating, ventilating, air-conditioning and refrigeration (HVACR) industries.

A people person who recognizes how important it is to be a good communicator and listener, Stew says, "I enjoy working with business owners, executives, and their team advising them proactively, coming up with new ideas and resolving potential problem issues. I also enjoy keeping abreast of the changing guidelines in the financial accounting area, and changing tax laws so that I can determine how it will impact them."

He enjoys golf, listening to music, the warm summer days, and most importantly time with the family.
